NOTES

A good resume lists up-to-date credits, a brief history of training, and any pertinent and interesting special skills. A great resume contains all of those, and is also organized, formatted correctly, and attached to your headshot in an unobtrusive way. It can be tedious work to ensure that every element of your resume is just right, but getting this wrong can make you appear unprofessional, unprepared, or just plain uninterested in your own career. Let's get it right!

.....
WHICH CREDITS DO YOU WANT TO FEATURE ON YOUR RESUME, AND WHY? _____

.....
[TIP] Be Honest: It may feel great to get an audition because you have archery on your resume, but if you get to the appointment and can't shoot a bow and arrow, don't expect to be called in to that office ever again.
